Revision

Muhammad Yunus won the Nobel Peace Prize in 2006. He created a special bank to help poor people in his home country, Bangladesh, and this has had a very positive effect on the community. In the past, poor people weren't able to borrow money from banks, but Mr Yunus found that if the bank lent money to women to create a small business, they would pay it back and the bank wouldn't lose its money. This has allowed many women to be able to support their children and send them to school, all thanks to a loan from Mr Yunus's special bank.
