

Great Castles of Britain

There are hundreds of castles in the UK – some of them are now ruins, and some of them are still homes today. They are places of danger, murder and mystery! Here are my four favourite UK castles.

Windsor Castle

Windsor Castle is the oldest occupied castle in the world. It is 900 years old and it's the Queen's weekend home. Over one million people visit Windsor Castle every year to admire the rooms, the furniture and many paintings. The biggest room in Windsor Castle is St George's Hall. It is 55 metres long and 9 metres wide. The dining table in St George's Hall can seat 162 people and the Queen sometimes has State Banquets in this room.

Bodiam Castle

Bodiam Castle is a 14th century castle near the village of Robertsbridge in south-east England. It is a moated castle – this means that it has a deep channel filled with water all around the outside walls. The moat protected the castle from invaders. During the 17th and 18th centuries, Bodiam Castle became a ruin, but it is now a very popular tourist attraction. Many people enjoy having a picnic in the fields while they look at the beautiful old castle walls.

St Michael's Mount

St Michael's Mount is a 12th century castle on an island. The island is tidal, so at some times of the day you can walk from the town of Marazion to St Michael's Mount, but at other times you have to swim or take a boat! The St Aubyn family bought the island and the castle in 1659 and they still live there today. They don't have many neighbours – the total population of the island is just 35!

Stirling Castle

Stirling Castle is one of the largest castles in Scotland and many Scottish Kings and Queens lived here. The oldest parts of the castle are eight hundred years old. In 1507, scientist John Damian tried to fly from Stirling Castle to France. He made wings from wood and chicken feathers and jumped from the top of the castle walls. Unfortunately he was not successful and he fell into a dung heap!
